Dear Sir;

In reply to your confidential letter dated April 24th 27.

I have known Mr E. W. Cunliffe intimately for a few years; he is a great credit to parents who are respected by everyone who know them. His character is exemplary with no weak points.

His capabilities are many,
especially electrical & wireless engineering; he spends practically all his spare time at home with his hobbies.

Yours faithfully
Char H. Rowe.

Dear Sir,

28th April 1927.

It is a pleasure to testify to the character and abilities of Mr. E. N. Cunliffe.

I have known his people intimately for some years and have watched with interest Neil's growth and development.

At the Grammar School he did very well indeed and was Captain when he left. His record for solid conscientious work has been maintained since he attended the University.

Others can testify to his present academic qualifications & abilities, better than I but with regard to his moral character I can speak with assurance.

He is a fine type of young man - clean living, fond of games, devoted to his parents and companionable.

I am uncertain as to what you mean by strong and weak points of character. Certainly he has no vices. He does not gamble or drink - Smoking is no vice now-a-days.

I recommend him for your acceptance without any reservation or qualification as a young man of upright character and strict morals.

If you desire further information on any specific point I shall be glad to give it.

Yours faithfully,
William F. G. Williams

Dear Sir

With reference to my application for admission to St. Anselm's Hall, I should be glad to know whether I can commence residence there at the commencement of next session, 1927-8.

I am also anxious to know if I can have a single room, because I shall be in my third year, and will be better able to concentrate on my studies if I am alone

I am

Yours faithfully
